We are proud to announce that our organisations have formed a joint commitment to support & guide the advancement of women in tech and to positively impact the current gender pay gap. Our vision There are over 50,000 women working in technology in Australia but only 11.3% of senior and board roles are filled by women. We support the delivery of high quality essential services to residents in Local Government areas. Our mission is to be a leader in Local Government Service delivery and support Local Government to make a real difference for the many residents who rely on the services we provide. I want to send text to specific phone number by sending a udf file and I am trying it in Android using BlueZ. I have installed BlueZ and even successfully tested it for some Android applications but for some. The following table will be used to capture the Statistics of the traffic of each packet: Â .Q: "è scomparso tra poco" meaning and usage I'm trying to figure out what "è scomparso tra poco" means. For example, this appears in a Google voice search: Sono stati sventrati, che è scomparso tra poco. For context, there was an earthquake. I was told that a "scomparso" is something like a "deceased" or "died" but I don't know if this is right. Can anyone define it and explain the meaning? A: I'm not sure I completely understand what you need but maybe you can clarify: tra poco is a kind of "between times", without any further meanings that I can find, the closest "between times" would be: Subito dopo Now, come to the meaning in your example, it seems that the person was buried or "scomparso" is a kind of "statue" (a sculpture, or person made as a statue): "Sono stati sventrati, che è scomparso tra poco" then after some seconds the person was found dead or somewhere else. Notice that it is "Sono stati sventrati," that has the indirect object marker "che": For example, in Italian you would say something like this instead: Sono stati sventrati a loro insaputa, che è scomparso tra poco. It should be possible to find a dead body or a missing person in a very short timespan. Anyway, this happens in lots of news/comedy/horror stories. case Keys.A: return A; case Keys.S: return S;
