Lightroom 5 is primarily being released for the Mac platform. Among the new features in Lightroom 5 are a new color panel for the Tint feature, new controls for color addition and subtraction, better UI tweaks, improved performance, and some better RAW file support. The final specification of Lightroom 5 is 1.05 GB in the '.lightroom' format and, like Lightroom 4, it's a bootable application (just in.dmg format, though). Considering how the data was shared between the application and the iPad in the previous version through the previously mentioned iPadsync, users will be happy to find the new Lightroom can be installed on a regular MacBook Pro, too. That said, the application is a big improvement over the previous version, and continues the unabating support from Adobe in providing the best creative-software-for-photographers in the market. As an added bonus, the upgrade was free. I see this as a huge help; unlike for similar software, consumers are not usually charged an upgrade fee after buying the software. The release of Lightroom 5 is a major enhancement over the previous version, and, like the other versions, should be a boon for the photography community. I'd even consider purchasing a new device to run this exciting program. The new features introduced in Lightroom 5 include: Improved Lightroom Panel features; new features like the Color Picker and a nearly instant Image Preview; new Matching and History Search features; improved Select Features and UI adjustments; better performance for editing; and the UI is now cleaner and more intuitive. There have also been some limitations added, like you cannot Scratch or Rotate Reference Photos used for leveling the image.

Photoshop CC now features a brand new interface featuring a unique new color pallet, typography and stylistic options. The palette is unique in the way that it ushers the user to a "web" design, breaking away from the traditional gray/black/white/red look that has been present in previous versions of Photoshop. The palette is made up of colors that are derived from the web, including cool colors like blue, purple, green, yellow, orange, pink, red, black, grey, etc. This color palette was chosen because it reflects many of the design trends in the web that are used now. The typography features in Photoshop CC has been redesigned to follow the more common design trends used by web designers today. Special accent fonts such as Helvetica and Arial have been replaced with more inline font styles. The interface also provides the option to use pre-configured interface defaults which are in line with standard web design conventions where any text that changes is usually set in a `font-size` of 16px and is generally set to 18px text only. Another area of the design that has been updated is the Depiction Handling which now provides an easy way for the user to interact with the tool, rather than relying on the mouse. In addition to the visual overhaul, Adobe has upgraded the entire codebase to follow web standards more closely, using CSS3 technologies that are faster and generally more robust than `.NET`. The web design workflow workflow has also been improved with the inclusion of a CSS-based toolkit.

More Selections with SDR Industries selection tools are now accessible when using lightroom or after you save the image in Lightroom.
